

NOVEMBER FAMILY ACTIVITIES

We may have different demands on our time, but one thing we all value as parents is quality time with our kids. Whether you have twenty minutes or two hours to spend with your child today, we want to equip you with some fun ways to embrace the season together! To find instructions for each of these activities, check out the Elevation eKidz Pinterest board for November Family Activities.

Create a Give. Save. Spend. Kit

Gratitude inspires generosity. As we enter this Thanksgiving season, we want to be prepared to give. Our DIY Give. Save. Spend kit will help you teach your child foundational money management principles and start conversations about how your family can be ready to give generously throughout the holidays. The kit includes three family devotionals as well as several printable resources you can use to create a set of Give. Save. Spend. containers with your child.

Whip Up Some Delicious Fall Treats

Spend some time in the kitchen with your child. If you're up for baking, try our favorite pumpkin bread recipe! If you need something a little faster or simpler, mix up a batch of yummy harvest party mix.

Play the Gratitude Game as a Family

Whether your family is looking for a mealtime conversation starter or you want to put a Thanksgiving spin on your family game night, the Gratitude Game is a great way to practice thankfulness together! Grab some colorful sticks (e.g., colored straws, popsicle sticks, toothpicks, etc.) and try a version that's played similar to "Pick-Up Sticks," or use a pack of M&M's to add a delicious bonus to the game!

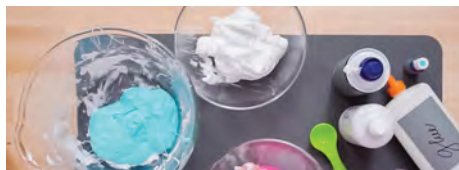

Create a Thankful Tree or Fill Out a Thankfulness Calendar

We create grateful hearts when we practice consistent gratitude. Use our Thankfulness Calendar or help your child create a Thankful Tree to make gratitude practice a fun part of your day!

Get Silly Together with Fall Slime

If your child loves slime (and if you love the colors and aromas of fall!), a batch of this fall slime will make your child extra thankful for some quality time with you!
