

APRIL FAMILY ACTIVITIES

Life may look a little different for your family this month. Your kids are at home more (and you are, too!), and you're probably wondering how to fill all the time you have together while still practicing social distancing. You may also be looking for ways to keep your kids engaged that don't require too much of your focus or energy. We want to equip you with some fun ways to make the most of this unconventional season! To find instructions for each of these activities, check out the Elevation eKidz Pinterest board for April Family Activities.

Focus your attention on what matters most.

Easter is coming! On this day, we celebrate the most important victory in human history — the day Jesus conquered sin and death. As you prepare to lead your family in remembering and celebrating this day together, check out the book recommendations, activity ideas, and themed recipes we've gathered for you!

Help your kids engage in screen-free fun.

In a season when many of us are spending more time than usual in close quarters with our kids, giving the kids extra screen time doesn't have to be your only option to keep them occupied. We've gathered plenty of games, activities, crafts, and recipes to help you keep your kids engaged with minimal effort or cost on your part!

Give your family an extra reason to listen up!

Whether you're in the car or on the couch together, we have family friendly podcast and audiobook recommendations we can't wait for your family to experience!

Get in the kitchen together and add a twist to your snack time.

April 26th is National Pretzel Day. Take this opportunity to spend some fun, quality time together in the kitchen making these yummy pretzel treats!

Take advantage of all spring has to offer, even if you're stuck at home.

Spring is a season for new beginnings, so take advantage of this time to create some new rhythms and opportunities for your family. Engage in outdoor play and adventuring together, try some simple gardening in your yard, or involve your kids in helping refresh your home as you do your spring cleaning!
