

MARCH FAMILY ACTIVITIES

We may have different demands on our time, but one thing we all value as parents is quality time with our kids. Whether you have 20 minutes or two hours to spend with your child today, we want to equip you with some fun ways to embrace your time together! To find instructions for each of these activities, check out the Elevation eKidz Pinterest board for March Family Activities.

Unplug Your Devices and Tune in to Your Family.

National Day of Unplugging begins at sundown on March 6, and we'd like to help your family enjoy some unplugged time together! Check out our board to learn more about what this day means and find lots of ideas for fun ways to spend quality time together.

Refresh Your Home and Your Habits in Anticipation of Spring!

Fresh air and warmer weather make spring a great time to get active. Enjoy the outdoors with your kids on a nature walk or try some easy gardening projects together. Then enlist their help with some household spring cleaning so it feels as great inside your home as the spring weather feels outside!

Put Your Favorite Books in the Spotlight.

March 2 is Read Across America Day, celebrated on Dr. Seuss's birthday because of his numerous contributions to children's literature. We have plenty of excellent children's books to recommend, plus some fun recipes and activities connected to these books that your family can try together!

Let March Madness Extend Beyond Just Basketball.

Your kids may not be excited about the basketball tournament, but that doesn't mean they have to miss out on the bracket fun! Take a look at our selection of family-friendly brackets you can fill out together, or have everyone fill them out separately and then compare. You could also print a blank bracket and fill it with whatever topic your family is passionate about!
